

Survivor Island

The world is full of celebrities who represent the American dream to many of us. They are our idols, our role models, and our ideal of what success looks like. But these role models, are not what they appear to be. Although we want to be just like them, they are not necessarily holding up their end of the superstar bargain. They have realized their success at the expense of common decency, morality, or being a law abiding part of society.

A representative group of such celebrities have been brought together by a mysterious TV producer who has lured them to Survivor Island for a million-dollar reality show competition. They are here to compete for a million dollars for their favorite charity as well as a million dollars for themselves! (Most of them seem to need it for cosmetic surgery, lawyers, and designer clothes.)>

What they don't know is that their philanthropic journey will change their lives more than they could ever imagine!
